Happy Homework Time

We know that sometimes getting homework done can be a struggle. There are lots of reasons why homework time is miserable. Maybe the children are struggling with a subject? Have they left the homework till the last minute, after promising you it had already been done? Have you just run out of time because we all lead such busy lives? Whatever the reason, perhaps some of the following tips can help?

Set up a 'Homework station'. This should be an area which is distraction free and quiet. Make sure the space will always be available so homework can always be done there. Try to make sure it is well lit and turn the television off! Have all stationery available - there is nothing worse than settling down to do your work and finding that you can't do it because you can not find a pencil sharpener?

Never complete the homework for them, it doesn't help in the long run. Try to use other examples using the methods which they have been taught by. Using the methods you remember from school may really confuse them.

If all else fails, remember that Miss Rudd runs a homework club on Wednesdays after school and you can always contact the class teacher on Dojo to ask for tips on how to help your child.
